IS LACK OF FAITH

JEALOUS MAN UNCOMPLIMENTARY TO LOVED ONE.

Perfect Faith Should Follow the Plighting of Troth—"What Is Worthy of Jealousy Is Not Worthy of Love."

Among the dictionary definitions of jealousy is that of envy. True, another is zealous watchfulness, but this state of mind implies fear, the uneasiness of uncertainty, and this is incompatible with the perfect love which casteth out fear. As associated with love the word implies a dread of losing the thing desired, a state of mind which to the timid perhaps is natural and well nigh inevitable in the first stages of courtship.

The man who is seeking to win a woman and who has rivals in the field has a strain upon his nerves and emotions which upsets his normal balance. He becomes worried, fanciful and moody.

The woman who already is won, but who must conceal her feelings until the victor chooses to claim his conquest, scarcely can fail to be restless, capricious and nervous. This mainly is due to the restraint which she is putting upon herself and the haunting fear that he may be in love with some one else.

But when the lover has spoken and each holds the plighted troth of the beloved, then jealousy even in its most amiable form involves a lack of faith in the truth and the sincerity of the beloved which is anything but commendable, declares a writer in the Chicago Tribune.

Whatever its cause, jealousy is bound to be a disturbing element, and the less indulged it is the better. Although the expression of it is more painful than helpful, there is a great deal of truth in the doctrine of mental suggestion as applied to love, and this especially is the case with men.

The jealous woman hates to hear other women praised, and though she possibly may remark upon their good qualities herself, she objects when one of her own admirers, however faintly, expresses admiration for another woman. And when she praises it is with a reservation. "She is pretty, but," etc. No wise man would marry a jealous woman, however much he might care for her, could he realize how little peace and comfort probably will be his portion after marriage. No wise woman would marry a jealous man, since she certainly could not hope to be happy if she did.

Jealousy is responsible for more broken engagements, more matrimonial unhappiness, than any other cause, with the possible exception of beastly intemperance in drink. Yet people who ought to know better go on excusing it, claiming that it is the result of love and the natural outgrowth of a humble opinion of oneself. Instead of being, as in nearly all cases it is, the result of colossal vanity, a vanity which is exasperated at the thought of precedence given to another.

The man or woman whose temperament will allow him or her to pass through life superior to the pangs of jealousy has cause to be thankful. It is wise to remember the saying of the Greek sage, that "what is worthy of jealousy is not worthy of love."

Character Written on the Face.

Faces are records on which appear the result of every selfish, malicious thought and every wicked desire. The woman who flies into fits of temper soon looks like an orange or a dragon. The man who dissipates and drinks soon acquires the loser's countenance. Moreover, it is our good, true thoughts that make for our happiness, as well as our appearance. All the mental and physical systems are practically controlled by these little guests of our brains. Lie awake all night and worry and behold your next morning face. It will scare you to death. You can change your embittered moods by exercise out of doors, by going to church, reading wholesomely stimulating books, by associating more with children and by doing good, kindly acts for those who are about you.

Women Like Pockets.

"Talk about the small boy and his desire for plenty of pockets," remarked Harry New, manager of one of the biggest concerns in the city or in the west, manufacturing women's garments, "no youngster with his first pair of trousers is half as excited about his pockets as is the average woman buying a cloak or suit. Within the last few years the question of pockets has come to be an important matter in women's garments. Women not only like pockets for carrying various small articles, but they can even like them so placed in their coats that they can walk with their hands in them, the same as a man. It's getting so that we manufacturers hardly dare put out a garment without paying attention first of all to the pocket feature."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Minstrelsy of Wall Street.

It was at the Nobilette reception and Mme. Helene Caroleostall was rendering the latest popular successes. Finishing a selection, she requested suggestions for the next effort.

"If you could render something suggestive of the Nobilette prestige and family traditions," hinted Mr. O. Watteau Nobilette.

Whereupon the famous prima donna sang in exquisite tremolo that touching pastoral ballad entitled: "Down Along the Flowing Hudson the Common Stock Is Being Watered."—Judge.

FIELD OF HONOR COMMISSION.

Practices Seem Absurd To-Day, But Had Their Place in History.

Perhaps wit is stimulated by a slight derangement of the nerves, and good things said on the field of battle are sometimes recorded. When "Bully Egan" fought Curran with pistols the bulky Egan complained that his opponent was as thin as a blade of grass. "Let my size be chalked out upon your body," said Curran, "and any hits outside of the line shall not count."

It was not good form, however, to make a parade of magnanimity, and the coxcombical practice of firing in the air or "dumb shooting" or "children's play" was strictly prohibited by the rules, of which 36 were drawn up by representatives of the five most eminent counties—Galway, Tipperary, Mayo, Sligo and Roscommon—in 1777. They met at the summer assizes at Clonmel and seem to have done their work very gravely and honestly, including a special rule for "simple, unpremeditated encounters with the small sword." There is a large element of absurdity about it all, no doubt, but even dueling has had its place as a rough, inefficient test of manhood.

ATTENTION A MOMENT, SMOKERS

More or Less Authentic Facts Are Put Forward in This Story.

The users of tobacco, it would appear, are subject to undreamed-of dangers. A French medical journal tells an interesting tale of a man who while smoking a pipe had a serious fall. Some time later a curious swelling appeared on his tongue, and this, after efforts had been vainly made to reduce it by common methods, was found to contain a fragment of the pipe that had been driven into it at the time of the fall. In another case an ulcer on the soft palate of a patient persisted for three years before it was investigated and found to contain a piece of a cigar holder. How this latter got there we are not informed, but it appears certain that if these persons had not been users of tobacco they would have escaped much discomfort. A word to the wise is sufficient!—Exchange.

A Borneo Parasite.

A famous rarity in the vegetable world of Borneo is the rafflesia, the bush pakmah of Malays. The plant is one of the most degraded of parasites, and so completely does it submerge itself in the tissues of its host that the only part which ever shows itself to the external world is the enormous flower. The diameter of the flower measures about two feet, the odor is repulsive and there is not one feature of beauty to recommend it to man. It appears, however, to hold an important place in the pharmacopoeia of the natives, which perhaps imagine that the plant to which nature has given so uninviting an exterior must possess some hidden virtue in the way of compensation. Various species of rafflesia are known in Borneo, and oddly enough their hosts are invariably species of vine (cissus).

American Democracy.

Privy Councillor Zuntz, on his return to Berlin, after a three-months' visit to the United States, delivered a lecture before the students of the Industrial high school of that city, in which he had much to say in praise of American students and of the college system under which they were trained. "Our students," he said, "can help themselves financially only by teaching. The American student has the advantage in this respect, because without losing caste or dignity, he can break stone, act as a waiter or porter, or do work at any trade. It is not an infrequent occurrence that a young man acts as a waiter at a gathering of people where he is received as an equal as soon as his mental duties have been performed."

Why They Don't Clap.

"Have you seen the near perfect woman, Maude Odell?" she asked. "No. You ought to see her. And if you want to be really amused, you ought to go and watch the men gazing at her wide-eyed, the men with their wives. They are taking in all her perfect points, but they are afraid to applaud her on account of their wives. That beautiful, near perfect woman leaves the stage nearly every time without a handclap on account of the wives."

How He Lost Out.

"It served me right," sighed the bachelor. "I ought to have remembered that women have no sense of humor."

"What's gnawing you now?" queried the inquisitive friend. "Why, during leap year a pretty girl with an obsequious fortune proposed to me, and I said 'no,'" explained the bachelor, "thinking, of course, she would take it for granted that my 'no' meant 'yes,' but she simply let it go at that."

One Was Lacking.

"We thought you would be married by now," they told the girl. "The last time we saw you you were with a fellow you seemed so fond of." "You did," she sighed. "I was. I still am awfully fond of him, but you see, it takes two to get married."

Paying for Experience

A severe "belly ache" is the price paid for the fun of eating green apples. Mamma told them not to do it, but it took actual experience to convince them.

We say the same thing about green lumber. It may look right, but after it is in the job a while, it will warp out of shape, and a bunch of trouble is what the experience will cost you. If you want to be sure of getting good, thoroughly seasoned lumber, don't take any chances, but come to us for it. It will cost you no more than the other kind will elsewhere.
